Volunteers Celebrate at 25th Anniversary Luncheon

Two of the more than 180 volunteers at the People Who Care 25th Anniversary Luncheon April 28 know better than anyone why that celebration was momentous – they were present at the very beginning of the organization.

PWC Founder and the first Executive Director Sarah Hoover-Meyer and 25-year volunteer Barbara Googe have seen this organization grow from an idea in Sarah's tiny kitchen office to the vibrant and vital nonprofit it is today.

In 1992, Sarah was newly retired as a counselor for Volunteer Interfaith Caregiver Program in Phoenix that helped homebound adults. "I thought every town ought to have a volunteer program like that, and I knew if it was going to happen in Prescott, I had to be involved."

So, with a handful of faith representatives, support from the Beatitudes Center's Developing Older Adult Resources in Phoenix, and service clubs and community individuals, People Who Care was born.

Barbara is not sure how she found out about People Who Care all those years ago, perhaps through a newspaper article, but she was hooked from the first orientation meeting.

"I was assigned a gal to take her shopping. I took her every week; she was my permanent client. We had a great time together," Barbara said.

Barbara continues her volunteer service three or four times a month, filling in for volunteers with ongoing assignments when a substitute is needed to help the Neighbor with grocery shopping. "Sometimes, we're about the only person a Neighbor sees."

In 1993, a start-up grant from the Public Welfare Foundation gave the group the boost they needed, and the Prescott United Methodist Church gave them space to operate.

"We had no forms, no computers and only a very simple brochure to tell people what we were doing," Sarah said. "Right away though, Catholic Social Services and area hospitals became aware of our help for people they were serving."

Needless to say, the organization grew and grew. "The need was so great," said Sarah, and "this is a great town for volunteering."

Barbara and Sarah agree that one of the great strengths of People Who Care is that the volunteers only do what they can. "You only do what you want to do; we were very strict about that," Sarah said.

That versatility has kept Barbara involved. "You can pick your times to fit your schedule. Not only are you helping your neighbors, People Who Care is a good outlet for getting out of your house," she said. "It's a marvelous organization. I will continue volunteering as long as I can get my driver's license renewed."

Today, churches, service groups and nonprofit organizations are still involved in People Who Care. "Their support is important," said Fritzi Mevis, executive director, "but it's the volunteers who make this organization what it is. Their caring and their devotion to our Neighbors is why we're celebrating this year."

When Sarah looks back at how People Who Care has grown, she can't help but feel pleased. "It's a blessing. It's a great organization."

Stroke Support Groups Help Stroke Survivors and Their Families

When a stroke happens, lives can change forever, not just for the stroke survivor, but for family members as well. The journey to recovery can be difficult, but survivors and family members don't need to manage alone.

To help make the journey easier, People Who Care is sponsoring Stroke Support Groups, featuring experts in speech pathology, social work and nursing.

The groups focus on ways to cope with the challenges and communicate with others facing the same circumstances. For stroke survivors, the meetings provide an opportunity to talk with other stroke victims. "People who have had a stroke understand me better," said one participant. "People at the group have patience with my slow speech – other people don't," another group member said.

For family members, the groups provide a way to share with other family members. "Other family members understand what I'm going through," said a participant. Another family member said, "The family group helps me understand my spouse's stroke better."

The groups are facilitated by Marianne Simpson, a retired speech pathologist; Gayla Allen, a retired medical social worker, and Mara Protas, a retired cardiac RN.

Attendance is free. For more information, call People Who Care at 928-445-2480.

Gerry Kemp, a carpenter, suffered a severe stroke when he was 54, leaving him paralyzed and unable to speak. After treatment at three hospitals and eight years in a nursing home, he was able to move to an apartment. PWC volunteers take him shopping and to appointments. He rides his electric scooter to his PWC Stroke Support Group meetings. Gerry said the support group gives him a place to talk to help improve his speaking (aphasia). More importantly, getting to know other people with stroke has helped him understand his own stroke better. Pictured with him, from left, are: Marianne Simpson, Gayla Allen and Mara Protas.

1 Minute Overview of People Who Care

It's not easy to reach out and ask for help when family and friends are not able or available. However, at times it is necessary. People Who Care is a non-profit tax deductible organization that provides assistance to adults who are unable to drive because of physical limitations. Enrolled clients receive caring non-medical assistance from volunteers who help residents in the community where they live - in Chino Valley, Prescott, and Prescott Valley/Dewey communities.

Throughout the year, more than 500 enrolled client Neighbors receive assistance to help them to be able to stay in their homes and continue living in their communities. It may be a visit to the grocery store a few times a month, a ride to the doctor's office or the bank, help with paperwork, or maybe just a friendly visit from a volunteer, or phone calls during the week.

People Who Care volunteers are truly the hearts and hands of a caring community.

Ways Our Volunteers Help Neighbors

People Who Care volunteers help their Neighbors in so many ways. These are some of them:

- Rides for healthcare and business appointments, support group meetings and visits to a family member in a healthcare facility.
- Rides for a grocery shopping trip and any help needed in the store and with carrying in groceries at home.
- Shopping for groceries for Neighbors who are not able or comfortable leaving their homes.
- Assistance with reading mail, writing checks to pay bills, reconciling the checkbook or writing personal notes to family and friends.
- Relief for full-time family caregivers for a few hours a week in order to give them a little time away and time on their own.
- A weekly friendly visit from a volunteer just spending time together sharing their lives past and present.
- Phone calls during the week to check in to see how everything's going this morning.
- A Guardian Angel personal emergency call device for Neighbors with limited incomes.
- A Project Safe Home safety visit to help prevent falls and accidents. Safety items and devices are provided when needed.

Give the Gift That Keeps on Giving Legacy Gift Helps People Who Care Help Neighbors

People Who Care is working hard to grow its endowment fund so that Neighbors will continue to be helped now and in the future. You can help by leaving a legacy gift in your will.

Our endowment fund with the Arizona Community Foundation is a critical part of our financial strategy.

People Who Care receives the largest share of its funding from community members who support our mission to provide caring, nonmedical assistance to adults unable to drive because of physical limitations in order to help them continue living independently in their homes.

The endowment has a restricted amount of money that is invested in different funds and earns a percentage of interest that can be returned each year to People Who Care.

We may choose to use the interest to support program costs or have the interest reinvested in the endowment fund. The fund will continue to grow in perpetuity.

Talk with your financial adviser about establishing your legacy gift, or call our office at 928-445-2480, for more information.

What you do today can make a difference that lasts forever.
